++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Changeable, but mostly dry in the east.

Today:
Further showers across Scotland, though becoming less frequent with winds gradually easing. Cloud in the southwest spreading north with some rain at times, particularly for high ground of Wales. Eastern parts seeing best shelter with some sun, feeling warm here.

Tonight:
A little rain for many, particularly northern England, southern parts of Northern Ireland and later north Scotland. Some clear spells and dry for most of southern Scotland and southeast England.

Sunday:
Rain or showers for many parts but these mostly light. Best of the shelter over southeast England, East Anglia and south Scotland where mostly dry with some sunshine.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Sunny spells and mostly dry Monday, but with thicker cloud and patchy rain from the northwest later. Often cloudy Tuesday and Wednesday, some rain in places but many areas dry.
